

A scatter plot with 20 data points of varying colors (blue, purple, red) scattered across a white background. The points are distributed in a way that suggests a non-linear relationship, with a higher density of points on the right side of the plot. The colors of the points vary, with blue and purple being the most common, and red being the least common. The points are scattered across the entire plot area, with no clear linear trend.